

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention, is an alarm system for detecting the presence of a child being left unattended in a car seat inside a parked vehicle. The alarm includes a weight sensor and temperature monitoring device. The weight of the child activates the unit, which then begins monitoring the interior temperature of the vehicle. Should both the car seat be occupied and the interior temperature reach pre-determined danger levels, an alarm will be triggered.